

Program (Draft)

ESAO Winter School 2018

Therapeutic Apheresis & Cellular Therapies

Semmering, Austria
January 25-27, 2018

Aims

- ❖ To provide high level education in specific fields of extracorporeal therapies
- ❖ To foster synergies between basic and applied science in an attempt to bring together biomaterial scientists, engineers, and clinicians

Scientific Committee (Chairs)

Viktoria Weber (Krems, Austria)
Volker Witt (Vienna, Austria)
Michael B. Fischer (Krems, Austria)

Organising Committee

Anita Aichinger (Krems, Austria)

Semmering

Die Semmeringbahn (Semmering railway) is commonly referred to as the world's first true mountain railway, given the very difficult terrain and the considerable altitude difference that was mastered during its construction between 1848 and 1854 by some 20,000 workers under the direction of Carl Ritter von Ghega. The construction features 14 tunnels, 16 viaducts and over 100 curved stone bridges, as well as 11 iron bridges. Across an overall track length of 41 km, the Semmering railway overcomes an altitude difference of 460 m. It was built with the attempt of achieving a harmonious combination of technology and nature and contributed significantly to the opening of the Semmering region for tourism.

In the early 1900s, Semmering became one of the most decent resorts in Europe, with guests from the Austro-Hungarian monarchy and from all over Europe. It hosted composers, writers, actors, artists, and philosophers, such as Gustav Mahler, Alma Mahler-Werfel, Oscar Kokoschka, Josefine Baker, Arthur Schnitzler, Stefan Zweig, Joseph Roth, Hemito von Doderer, Carl Moll, and Ludwig Wittgenstein, just to name a few. Famous architects and designers such as Adolf Loos, Walter Gropius, Joseph Urban, and Koloman Moser were active for their prominent customers, and numerous hotels and mansions are witnesses of this era.

In 1998, the Semmering railway was added to the list of the UNESCO World Heritage Sites. Today, Semmering has kept much of its flair and is an attractive destination for winter sports, hiking, and leisure.
